ORVIS THROWS HARPOON INTO SQUIRE KEICHLINE

Judge Sarcastically Raps Justice in Fish Cases.

QUASHES7 CONVICTIONS

In Decree Judge Orvis Heaps Ridicule on Carelessness in Preparation of Records New Trial in Case of J. D. Seibert vs. J. H. Lingle.

Judge Orvis sharply raps Justice of the Peace John M. Keichline in an opinion handed down this week, reversing the latter in sentencing seven men to pay $10 fine and costs, each, for alleged violation of the fish laws.

During the latter part of 1907 John Horner and John Ebert, of Penn township; E. B. McMullen, of Millheim borough, and J. W. Meyer, J. C. Vonada, E. I. Musser and T. G. Wolf, of Haines township, were arrested by G. D. Shannon, a fish warden, for alleged violation of the law relating to fish baskets. They were sentenced by Justice Keichline to a fine of $10 and costs, each. They appealed his decision and Judge Orvis this week handed down an opinion quashing the conviction and severely scoring Justice Keichline. In the case of Mr. Horner, Judge Orvis handed down the following :

"We do not deem it necessary to carefully reconsider the law involving summary convictions, but we do feel that where so many cases come before us from Justices of large experience that there should be an effort upon the part of said Justices to study the law necessary to support such a conviction and familiarize themselves with the nature of a record that can be sustained. The record of the Justice in this particular instance fails to show that the alleged crime was committed in the County of Centre, fails to show where the alleged illegal fishing was committed or in what waters, what acts were complained of or the time as fixed by the said evidence. In all these respects the record is fatally deficient. Furthermore, while the Justice avers that the defendant appeared and was sworn, none of his evidence is set forth. No one could determine upon the guilt or innocence of the defendant from this record, or of what he was guilty. In no respect is the record self-sustaining or even self-explanatory. We must, therefore, sustain the exceptions and set aside the record of conviction.

And now, to wit, January 19, exceptions to the record of the Justice are hereby sustained, the record of the conviction set aside, and the conviction itself quashed.

A number of other opinions were handed down by Judge Orvis. In one he grants a new trial in the case of James D. Seibert vs. J. Howard Lingle. Mr. Seibert some time ago secured a verdict in a suit against Mr. Lingle, involving a dispute regarding wages claimed due by the former. Mr. Lingle appealed, asking for a new trial, which is granted by Judge Orvis.

Judge Orvis, in a decree, dissolves the injunction in the case of A. W. Swisher vs. J. W. Bruss. An injunction was secured to restrain Bruss from operating on some timber land in Huston township. The Court dissolves the injunction and requires the plaintiff to file papers in ejectment on or before February 19.

The report of the viewers approving the petition to divide Harris township into two precincts was confirmed by Judge Orvis. The voting place in the eastern precinct will continue to be at Boalsburg. The voting place in the western precinct will probably be at Linden Hall.

The appeal of W. H. Ebey from the decision of Justice Keichline, sentencing him to pay a fine and costs for boisterous conduct, was refused by the Court.

A new trial was refused Burdine Butler, of Howard, recently convicted on the charge of malicious mischief. He was commanded to appear at the February court for sentence.

In the suit of Susan Miles vs. the Miles Green estate Judge Orvis referred the matter back to the auditor for redistribution of funds.

Another decree handed down was the result of a case stated to test the 1901 tax lien law. In the case in question, that of Centre County vs. J. C. Weaver, Mrs. Lillie G. Reeder purchased a property on a mortgage. It was contended by her counsel that the mortgage was entered before the passage of the 1901 law and therefore was a prior claim. This was sustained by the Court.

PHILADELPHIA MANUFACTURERS

Pleased With Greeting By Bellefonte Business Men.

Bellefonte business men yesterday extended cordial greeting to upward of 75 Philadelphia manufacturers who are touring Pennsylvania towns with the view of establishing more friendly relations with the Quaker City. The Philadelphians arrived here in their special train at 2 o'clock and remained until 3:15, when they continued on their journey, their next stop being Lock Haven.

A large delegation of representative business men of Bellefonte, headed by Joseph L. Montgomery, president of the Merchants' Association, was on hand to welcome the Philadelphians. After an exchange of greetings at the Pennsylvania passenger station, all preceeded to the Bush House where an informal reception was held in the parlors. Burgess John J. Bower made a brief address of welcome after W. Harrison Walker had called the meeting to order. Calvin M. Smyth, of the firm of Young, Smyth, Field & Co., responded in a happy manner, saying that he and his fellow Philadelphians expected to make another visit to Bellefonte probably next year. Edward James Cattell, representing Mayor Reyburn, of Philadelphia, was the concluding speaker.

At the close of the speech-making the visitors were conducted on a short tour of the town. They then returned to their train and departed for Lock Haven.

CENTRE COUNTY BANQUET

Annual Dinner Will be Held at Philadelphia, February 16.

At a meeting of the directors of the Centre County Association, of Philadelphia, on Thursday evening, January 27, it was decided to hold the sixth annual banquet of the association on the night of Wednesday, February 16. The place for the banquet has not been selected by the committee.

The meeting of the directors was held at the residence of Dr. Roland G. Curtin, 22 South Eighteenth Street. In addition to Dr. Curtin those present were Ira D. Garman, vice president; S. Gray Mattern, treasurer; Dr. J. C. C. Beale, secretary; Warner Underwood, L. Olin Meek, Herman Haupt, S. C. Runkle, William T. Meyer and William A. Magee.

All Centre County people residing in and about Philadelphia who have not received invitations to the former functions held by the association, and also those who have changed their addresses during the year of 1909, are earnestly requested to forward their name and proper address to the secretary at once. Those having this year's banquet in hand anticipate a large attendance and the most successful reunion since the organization of the association.

With Pleasure.

At the request of John A. Daley, of Romola, we take no little pleasure in announcing that he is not dead. Mr. Daley, like Mark Twain, insists that he is very much alive and that the thought of his death handn't occurred to him. Somehow, it became rumored on Tuesday that Mr. Daley was critically ill. The next fellow to hear the rumor walked around the corner and promptly went it one better by announcing that Mr. Daley was already with the Angels. With feelings of deep regret that so jovial a friend had quit this earth, we prepared to do our best in an obituary. Meanwhile we called up on the telephone for confirmation of the rumor. To our keen satisfaction, we received this reply:

"Kindly deny rumor; hadn't thought of dying. Fact is I'm too busy just now."

A Neat Compliment.

William H. Musser, who has no opposition for re-election as Justice of the Peace in the North ward, has received a letter from Justice of the Peace Edwin Kirk, of Jenkintown, containing this neat compliment: "This shows entire public confidence, it also shows that your people want to keep the office of Justice of the Peace above political considerations, which is right; that all people feel that justice will be administered by you to all alike, regardless of of politics, religion, nationality or color. While the office of Justice of the Peace is kept in this condition all people will respect it. Allow me, as a brother Justice, to congratulate you on your past record and your future prospects."

Home Destroyed by Fire.

The farm home of James Hartman, near Graham station, was totally destroyed by fire on Saturday night, last. The family were absent at the time and it is not known how the fire originated. The loss is about $2,500, partially covered by insurance.

ADVISE FARMERS TO PLANT ALFALFA FIELDS

Pamphlet Says Failures Could Have Been Avoided.

CLIMATE IS FAVORABLE

Treatment of Soil Explained—Alfalfa a Heavy Feeder and Will Not Thrive on Land Deficient in Plant Food—Urge Early Cutting.

An interesting discussion on the subject of alfalfa is presented in a pamphlet edited by the School of Agriculture and Experiment Station of the Pennsylvania State College. As we explained last week the pampelet is being distributed by the Pennsylvania Railroad to farm owners. We cheerfully publish the pamphlet in order that the information contained therein may be shared also by tenant farmers and others. The article follows :

"The value of red clover as a forage crop is appreciated by farmers. An acre of good alfalfa produces twice as much digestible nutrients as an acre of good clover, the digestible protein being three times as great. Alfalfa is a perennial, making good yields for a long term of years on land adapted to it, and it thus reduces the labor of caring for a given area of land. These facts justify the insistence that farmers in our eastern states make every reasonable effort to establish alfalfa fields. Failures have been due to many causes, as is the usual experience with any crop wholly new to those who would grow it. We believe that the great majority of failures could have been escaped and alfalfa would have been established if the requirements of the plant had been understood.

"1. Climate. Our climate is not unfavorable to alfalfa. This is proved by the success that follows seedings in thousands of localities in our eastern states.

"2. The Character of the Soil. Alfalfa grows well on a variety of soils, provided the drainage is good The most favorable soil may be a fertile sandy loam with a porous subsoil, but the greater part of the alfalfa now successfully grown in our eastern states is thriving on heavier soils.

"2. Soil Treatment. There must be drainage, fertility and lime, and to insure a stand of plants there should be a firm, moist seed bed and freedom from weed seed. It is history of alfalfa growing in our eastern states that the difficulty in getting stands decrease after the crop has been grown for a series of years, and in its introduction one can well afford to make the seed bed as thoroughly good as possible. If the land had been in sod, it should be given a heavy dressing of rotted manure and then planted with some crop requiring intercultural tillage. This breaks down the sod, mixes the manure with the soil and gives opportunity for destruction of weed seed.

"Do not break a grass sod and seed to alfalfa without rotting the sod and destroying all grass. Alfalfa cannot spread as blue grass does, and is easily crowded out by the latter or by weeds, in the first year. We emphasize the point that the soil should have a supply of rich organic matter mixed with the soil by tillage and that the ground should be reasonably free from grass and weed seed.

"Alfalfa is a lime-loving plant. Most cultivated plants make their best growth on land that is well supplied with available lime, but alfalfa is a plant that cannot thrive at all in a soil deficient in this respect. In our limestone valleys there may be a deficiency in available lime, due to leaching of the soluble portion. Other soils usually require lime for alfalfa. We urge that unless it is known that lime is present in abundance an application be made to land that is being fitted for this crop. On sandy land apply lime at the rate of 1000 to 2000 pounds per acre. On heavier soils apply 2000 to 4000 pounds per acre. The application may be made on the surface of the plowed land a year previous to the seeding, or to the land when being fitted by harrowing for the seed. Mix the lime with the surface soil.

"Alfalfa is a heavy feeder and will not thrive on land deficient in plant food. If there is a known deficiency in the mineral elements, phosphoric acid and potash, a liberal application should be made to supplement the dressing of stable manure. These fertilizers should be applied previous to seeding and well worked into the surface soil. We recommend 500 pounds per acre of a fertilizer composed of 350 pounds acid phosphate, 100 pounds muriate of potash,

CENSUS EXAMINATIONS CALLED FOR FEBRUARY 5

Classes at Bellefonte, Centre Hall and Philipsburg.

ADMISSION IS BY CARD

Supervisor Samuel R. Hamilton Gives Instruction as to Tests to Applicants for Appointment as Enumarators in Centre County.

Census Supervisor Samuel R. Hamilton, in charge of the several counties in the Twenty-first congressional district, has notified applicants for appointment as enumerators in Centre County that examinations will be held at Bellefonte, Centre Hall and Philipsburg on Saturday, February 5, at 10 o'clock, A. Admission to examinations will be by card, issued by Supervisor Hamilton. Those applicants residing at or nearby Philipsburg have been directed to attend the Philipsburg examination. Applicants residing at or nearby Centre Hall have been advised to appear at Centre Hall for examination. Applicants for the three appointments as enumerators at Bellefonte and also those residing nearby this place have been instructed to participate in the Bellefonte examination.

The exclusive announcement in "The Republican" last week of the apportionment of Centre County into census districts was read with interest by applicants for appointment as enumerators and many others. Numerous messages of inquiry for further information on the subject were received at "The Republican" office. As explained in this paper last week Centre county will have 39 numerators.

Each applicant for appointment as enumerator, who has received a card of admission to examinations from Supervisor Hamilton, has been notified to take with him pen, and pencil and also the illustrative example of the population and agriculture schedule previously supplied.

Pennsy Buys Land.

Considerable speculation as to what is planned by the Pennsylvania Railroad at Howard has been aroused by the filing of a deed at the Court House this week. The deed calls for a strip of land, extending from the Howard passenger station to the Howard rolling mill, parellel with and on the West side of the present tracks The width of the additional land varies at different points, in some places being thirty or more feet. Whether the company has purchased the land with the view of straightening the present tracks or of building additional tracks, for siding or yard purposes, is not known.

Elected Pastor.

At a congregational meeting of the Philipsburg Lutheran church, on Saturday, last, Rev. Dr. E. B. Killinger was unanimously elected pastor. He had been filling the pulpit for some time past and his election was received with expressions of gratification by the residents of Philipsburg.

ADVOCATE USE OF LIME TO ENRICH OUR SOIL

Pamphlet by State College School of Agriculture.

TIME OF APPLICATION

Should Pave Way for Clover but May Be Applied When Seed Bed is Being Made for Wheat, Oats or Other Crops With Clover.

The school of Agriculture and Experiment Station of the Pennsylvania State College have edited a pamphlet advocating the use of lime on land. Copies of the pamphlet have been sent to farm owners throughout the county. In order that tenant farmers and others also may have the benefit of the information presented in the pamphlet, we publish it, as follows:

"Experience teaches that some soils do not contain enough lime to permit the maximum production of crops. The area of these soils grows greater year by year. This is due in part to leaching. A deficiency in lime is not confined to soils outside of limestone bells, but may be found in soils originally rich in lime.

"Crop yields are limited by lack of lime. When this is the case, good farming requires that the lack be supplied. Some crops are affected by a low content of lime in the soil more quickly than others. Clover demands an abundance of lime. The tendency of soils to lose their lime results finally in clover failure, and gives opportunity to sorrel, plantain and other worthless plants that can thrive with a lower percentage of lime in the soil.

"Carriers of Lime. Limestone is our chief source of lime. When pure, it contains 56 per cent. of actual lime. If limestone could be made absolutely fine, 1120 pounds out of every ton would be effective in making up the deficiency of lime in a soil. There are manufacturing plants equipped for pulverizing raw limestone. Some can supply material which will pass through a 60-mesh screen. Such material is so fine that the actual lime in it—the 1120 pounds in each ton—is very effective. When the pulverized limestone is coarser, it is less valuable for use. Fineness is essential.

"When pure limestone is burned and the 44 per cent. which is not actual lime is driven off into the air, the 1120 pounds remaining is called stone lime This is the ordinary lime on the market. When a farmer buys 1120 pounds of stone lime he has the same amount of actual lime as he would have obtained in the ton of raw limestone, but there is at least this advantage. When the lime is slaked, it will be finer than the raw limestone that passed through a 60-mesh screen, and therefore it is more desirable on this account.

"When stone lime is perfectly slaked with water, the weight is increased 32 per cent. This increased weight adds nothing to the actual lime, but makes even distribution over the ground possible. Slaked lime is sometimes called hydrated lime, and is put on the market by some manufacturers as "patent process" lime. It is more convenient for use than stone lime because it is slaked, and it has about three-fourths as much strength as the stone lime before weight was added by slaking. Manufacturers have equipments for hydrating that enables them to do the slaking more perfectly than it is ordinarily done on the farm, and they bag it so that handling is easy.

"When stone lime or water-slaked lime stands exposed to the air, it finally takes from the air the material that was driven off by burning the limestone. It thus increases in weight until the 1120 pounds of stone lime, which resulted from burning a ton of limestone, becomes 2000 pounds, and the material has the same composition as that of raw limestone. For use on land it has somewhat more value because it is finer than raw limestone can be made by mechanical means.

"When stone lime is prepared for market, the lumps are forked out of the pile, and a remnant is left that may be about as pure as the stone lime, though usually some impurities are in it. This is called "agricultural lime," and its value depends upon its original purity and its freedom from any air-slaking which would add to its weight. The buyer must depend upon the statements of the seller respecting its quality.

"We have given figures of relative values for pure limestone and lime. When the impurities in limestone do not exceed 10 per cent. the limestone and lime may be rated as reasonably pure.

"Magnesium may have the same value as calcium in lime for use on land. While there may be soils in Pennsylvania that would profit in higher degree from an application of pure lime than from an application of magnesian lime, our present knowledge does not permit us to discriminate against the magnesian lime for use on our farms. It may be as good an investment as a pure calcium lime.

"Quantity per Acre. The amount of lime that should be applied to land varies much. If a soil is a tenacious clay, and physical improvement is desired, an application of two or three tons of stone lime may be profitable. Ordinarily lime is applied to make a soil friendly to clover and other plants, and the equivalent of one to one and one-half tons of stone lime per acre, applied once in each crop rotation, is usually a maximum amount. In many instances 1000 pounds per acre will accomplish the desired result, and smaller amounts may be sufficient. The equivalent of 1000 pounds of stone lime is between 1300 and 1350 pounds of slaked (hydrated) lime, or a little less than one ton of raw limestone reduced to a powder.

"Time of Application. An application of lime usually should pave the way for clover. It is well to apply lime a year or more before the seeding to clover. If this has not been done, it may be put on the land when the seed bed is being made for the wheat, oats or other crop with which clover is to be seeded.

"Method. Do not plow lime down, because this is wasteful. Apply with a lime spreader after the ground has been plowed. Mix it with the soil by use of harrow. Do not drill lime in with seeds, nor mix it with commercial fertilizer, nor use it in place of fertilizer. Apply lime to meet the lime requirement of a soil, and when this has been done, use manure and commercial fertilizers in the ways that have been found profitable for the crops which are to be grown, regardless of the fact that lime has been applied."

Advance Ideas in Penal Legislation.

Judge Bittenger, of York, in a criticism made for publication, has taken issue with those who defend the Tustin prison law passed by the last Legislature. This is the bill, as has been stated before, which provides for probation of first offenders of a certain class, the indeterminate sentence and the parole. It is a measure that has won the approval of the great majority of lawyers and jurists. Indeed, with one or two exceptions, the bar has seemed almost unanimously in favor of it.

But, taking the statement of the judge himself, one has but to glance over the records of some of the sentences meted out under the old law to prove the fallacy of his argument. In introducing the subject he says: "The judge is the most competent to decide the punishment." Is that really so? If it is, why do the records of one penal institution in this State show such injustice in the matter of sentences given? Here are a couple of instances that have been gleaned from the books of one penitentiary and which can be confirmed. In 1906 a young man, aged 13, was sentenced to nine years for robbery. He had never been in prison before. About the same time a man was sentenced to thirty days for larceny. He had been in prison six times before.

Again, during the same year, a boy of 18 was given a two-year sentence on the charge of larceny; a man convicted of breaking and entering a house with intent to commit a felony was given six months. This man had been in prison fifteen times before.

Any number of similar comparisons are at hand, and they do not seem to support Judge Bittenger's contention. It must further be considered that these first offenders were, under the old law, herded together with criminals of the worst class and that they came out of prison morally worse than when they entered. This is true to a certain degree today, of course, because provisions have not been made for segregation, but the necessity for such a condition has been removed in a measure under the probation clause, which gives first offenders of a certain class their liberty under certain conditions. This was not compulsory under the old law.

"It is the tendency of this act," Judge Bittenger argues, "to increase crime," and he endeavors to show that it encourages habitual criminals. The fallacy of this statement is proved by the fact that under the new law the "habitual criminal," or one who has served two terms in prison, is given absolutely no consideration in the sentence he receives. The judge has no alternative but to impose the maximum of thirty years. It must, of course, be proved that the man is what the law considers an habitual criminal, As stated before in these columns, investigations have shown that this class of convicts dreads the law and the sentence it requires in their cases.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

WOMEN'S WOES

Bellefonte Women are Finding Relief at Last.

It does seem that women have more than a fair share of the aches and pains that afflict humanity; they must "keep up," must attend to duties in spite of constantly aching backs, or headaches, dizzy spells, bearing-down pains; they must stoop over, when to stoop means torture. They must walk and tend and work with racking pains and many aches from kidney ills. Kidneys cause more suffering than any other organ of the body. Keep the kidneys well and health is easily maintained. Doan's Kidney Pills is a remedy for kidneys only that helps and cures the kidneys and is endorsed by people you know.

Mrs. John Andress, 245 S. Spring Street, Bellefonte, Pa., says: "I willingly confirm the public statement I gave in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills two years ago, after they had benefited me so greatly. I procured this remedy at Green's Pharmacy Co. when suffering from backache and severe pains in my loins and its use brought prompt and lasting relief. Another member of my family also took Doan's Kidney Pills and was cured of Kidney trouble."

CARE OF BROOD SOWS

Attention at Farrowing Times Will Prevent Disaster.

From this time on to the time of farrowing the brood sow should have good care. No animal is more unprofitable than a poorly kept and neglected sow, and nothing is more profitable than one that is properly cared for. It makes little difference what breed she is, so long as she is a good breeder Some of the most profitable sows I ever saw were grades that were bred to full blooded sires. If you have a good brood sow that fills the bill no matter if she is a grade, keep her as long as she is profitable. The older she gets, up to a certain age, the better she usually is. Large litters and stronger pigs are what you want. The first two months of pregnancy the sow may be fed considerable corn, in order to get her in good condition by the time she has pigs. The next month the corn should be gradually diminished, until it disappears from the ration, and middlings, bran, roots and slops from the house should be fed. This will make bone and muscle, which is necessary for the best results in the pigs. It will also put the sow in the est condition for farrowing. The sow will not be so likely to destroy her pigs, and the pigs will be larger and stronger and better prepared to start on a profitable career for the benefit of her owner.

One of the chief sources of profit in hog raising is the saving of all the young pigs. By paying close attention to feeding and giving good quarters to the sows the loss from dead pigs can be greatly reduced. Sows should be separated from other hogs early in pregnancy, and not allowed to bunch up or pile on each other in cold weather. This is always a source of loss in causing premature births and dead pigs at arrowing time, and is often the ruin of a good brood sow

Two sows are enough to run together, and they should be separated two weeks before the time to have pigs, and each should be put into a small pen by herself, with a good dry bed and a yard to exercise in. A small, warm pen six feet square is large enough, and a railing about a foot high from the floor and six or eight inches out from the wall. This acts as a protection to the young pigs when the sow lies down. I have watched my sows and know that this railing has been the means of saving many pigs from being killed.

When the pigs are born don't give the sow anything to eat the first day, except a little warm water with a handful of oatmeal. The next day a very thin slop may be given. Increase gradually the feed, and let it be a full week before the sow is put on full feed. After this she may be fed all she will eat, for by this time the pigs will take all the milk.

Remember that a sow which is a good milker will give about thirty pounds of milk a day—as much as a fairly good milk cow—and if fed too much milk producing food when the pigs are young she will make more milk than they can take, and bad results are very likely to follow. I once lost a valuable sow by not feeding properly. Too much slop and middlings were few too soon. The result was too much milk, with caked udder and blood poison. The pigs died and the sow died. I learned a lesson, and have given the matter more careful attention since. J. A. Macdonald, Hermanville, Price Edward Island, in N. Y. Tribune Farmer.

Easy Money.

How the street urchin spots an "easy mark" and gets the coin was shown recently at Third and Chestnut streets. An excellently dressed young man with a setter dog which he held by a strap was standing on the corner.

One of the newsboys stood beside the dog and when its master was not looking reached down and gave its tail a sharp pull. With a yelp of pain the dog turned quickly and jumped for its tormentor, but missed him by several inches.

The fact that the dog did not bite him was no obstacle to the boy, who grabbed his left arm with his right hand and began to scream furiously. "It bit me; it bit me. Take me to a hospital."

The owner of the dog became alarmed and ran to the boy. "Here, son," he said, "take this five dollar bill and keep quiet. It'll be all right," and he hurried away.

"Easy money," said the newsboy as he joined his companions.—Philadelphia Times.

Bloodshed Averted.

Opie Read, the novelist, once told of his experiences as a journalist in Kentucky many years ago.

"There was a good deal of news," he said, "such as shootings and knifings, but this news was not regarded as important, and little attention was paid to it. I remember once, when a local feud broke out afresh, when members of the opposing sides met at the county seat. There were hot words, a blow was struck, and weapons were drawn, when the sheriff interfered. He loudly announced that he would not tolerate any violence, ordered the parties to separate, and when his orders were not obeyed he began shooting. I forget whether he killed eight or nine, but I know that in describing the incident in my paper I commended the sheriff for his prompt action and bravery and added the paragraph. 'There is no doubt but for the prompt action of the sheriff there would have been bloodshed.'"

Brains For Diet.

There is a latent truth in the primitive Maori belief that by eating the brains of his enemies a warrior acquired their skill and cunning.

It was a custom among these savages, whose descendants I have seen and admired in Hawaii and New Zealand, to hold a brain feast after a successful battle. The conquering chief always reserved for his own portion the gray matter of the opposing leader. Observe how the practice works out in modern life. We do not actually eat our rivals' brains, but if we are wise we will try to absorb what those brains contain. The man who makes a big success is the man who makes the best use of his enemies, studies their moves, learns their method, knows what thought processes they are apt to follow. Down here in the street I guess we're more or less akin to the Maoris, anyway.—New York Herald.

Finger Prints Never Fail.

Although scars from wounds and ulcers frequently partly destroy the pattern folds, such disfigurements are more often than otherwise aids to identification. When the system of finger prints was first introduced at police headquarters in New York a lieutenant in one of the administrative departments tried to discredit it. He had an experimental print made of the tip of a finger and a short time afterward asked to have the same finger reprinted. He had meantime ground down the skin of this finger on a grindstone until the blood almost flowed. Nevertheless the pattern form was more accurately disclosed in the second printing than in the first. Once the record has been made nothing has yet been discovered to invalidate it.—Charles Brewer in Century.

The Small Boy's Revenge.

A family whose means were limited was expecting company for dinner, and the thoughful mother instructed her small son how to behave at the table and also told him there was one thing on the table he was not to ask for.

The appointed time came, and things looked very tempting, especially to the small boy, who suddenly said, "Say, ma, I want some of that," pointing to a plate of cheese.

The mother cast reproving glances upon him, but the child continued, "You going to give me some of that?" The mother again tried to attract the boy's attention to his error by stepping upon his toes, but it was of no use, for he continued, "Give me some of that or I'll tell." Beginning to count, he said: "One, you going to give me some? Two, you going to give me some? Three, my pants are made of the old window shades."

Photographing Falling Snow.

"If you would picture falling snow, cover your camera," says Womsn's Home Companion for February. "That is all there is to it. See that the nearest flakes which fall in front of your lens are from six to ten feet distant; a pair of umbrellas, an open shed, taking the picture from within a room looking out of a window, a hundred means suggest themselves. Give an exposure of the slow snap-shot variety, a fifth or a tenth of a second, of course with the lens as wide open as it can be, rather than the fastest exposure you can make. Choose a storm of slow-dropping, heavy, large flakes for such work, not the swift, fine, driving snow, unless indeed the wind is whirling it up in clouds, when stunning effects can be made This, and the use of orthochromatic film, is all that is neccessary for a snow picture."

Epilepsy, Fits

Convulsions, or Spasms and St. Vitus' Dance are Nervous Diseases. Most cases can be cured by strengthening and building up the nervous system. To do this a nerve medicine is needed. Dr. Miles' Nervine will be found efficacious and satisfactory. It has cured many cases of these diseases and we believe it will cure you. We can give you names of many who have been cured through its use. Write for advice.

"My son John had epilepsy for years, and after having him treated by specialists for over 2 years he still continued to have spells. I had almost given up in despair, but knowing the virtue of Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills for sick headache, I concluded to try the Nervine. During June, 1906, I gave him a teaspoonful three times a day, then in July I gave it as directed, and I could see that he was improving, and he has not had a spell since August 28, 1906, and has taken no medicine since Jan.-07. I am writing the case just as it is hoping it will induce others to try it."

CAUGHT THE MOOD.

The Incident That Helped Verdi With His "Miserere."

Men of genius are confessedly creatures of mood. Grief and adversity have often been a real help to them rather than a hindrance. Poe, it is said, produced "The Raven" while sitting at the bedside of his sleeping but dying wife. Many similar instances might be cited, but an anecdote of Verdi, told by Carlo Ceccarelli, will suffice.

On one occasion when Verdi was engaged on his well known opera, "Il Trovatore," he stopped short at the passage of the "Miserere," being at a loss to combine notes of sufficient sadness and pathos to express the grief of the prisoner, Manrico.

Sitting at his piano in the deep stillness of the winter night, his imagination wandered back to the stormy days of his youth, endeavoring to extract from the past a plaint, a groan, like those which escaped from his breast when he saw himself forsaken by the world. All in vain!

One day at Milan he was unexpectedly called to the bedside of a dying friend, one of the few who had remained faithful to him in adversity and prosperity. Verdi at the sight of his dying friend felt a lump rise in his throat. He wanted to weep, but so intense was his grief that not a tear flowed to the relief of his anguish.

In an adjoining room stood a piano. Verdi, under one of those sudden impulses to which men of genius are sometimes subject, sat down at the instrument and there and then improvised the sublime "Miserere" of the "Trovatore." The musician had given utterance to his grief.

QUEER JEWELRY.

Telegraph Wire Necklaces and Insulators as Earrings.

The aesthetic and decorative uses to which barbarians will turn objects which to civilized races are things of the humblest utility are amusingly illustrated by this "fashion note" from West Africa taken from an Italian newspaper:

For some time the officials of the German colony in Southwest Africa noticed that the telegraph wires and other accessories of the electrical plant disappeared as by magic immediately after they had been put up. The most diligent inquiries remained fruitless.

From other parts of the German possessions came reports of strange predilections for articles of German commerce, as, for example, rubber heels, garters, buckles, and so forth, things which the natives of those countries do not generally use.

The governor of the colony gave an entertainment one year in honor of the emperor's birthday and invited the chiefs of the different tribes to it. What was his surprise when he saw these native gentlemen appear with his stolen telegraph wires twisted round their illustrious necks. The higher the dignity the more rings of the wire were round the neck.

Inquiries were soon started in the outlying villages, and it came to light that the white china insulators of the telegraph poles had become earrings. A young lady of the highest distinction in native society wore a rubber heel hanging from her nose, and a young man who was a well known dandy wore dangling from his ears a pair of beautiful pink silk garters.

A Soldier's Beginnings.

We were visiting at Sandringham. Sir Evelyn Wood, who is very deaf, crept up as near as he could to the musicians, and in one of the pauses he said to me, "Are you fond of music?" I answered, "Yes." "Do you play anything?" I said. "No." "Well," he went on, "I am so fond of it that, would you believe it, I began to practice scales at twenty-four. But one day my sister came up and put her hand on my shoulder and said, 'My dear boy, you had better give that up,' and so I did." He also told me that he began life as a sailor, then went to the bar and finally entered the army. The only profession he had not tried was the church, and his enemies say he would have tried that, only he did not know what church to choose.—"Life of Sir William Broadbent."

The Failing Branch.

In the grounds of Dalhousie castle, Scotland, is said to be a famous example of the sympathy of the vegetable world with human death. It was anciently believed in the neighborhood that a branch always fell from this oak when a member of the family died. Apparently the fall of the original tree early in the eighteenth century did not break the sympathy, for a new one sprang from the old root, and it is upon record that as lately as 1874 an old forester, seeing a branch fall from this on a still day, cried, "The laird's deed noo!" News of the eleventh Earl of Dalhousie's death soon followed.

Straightforward.

He—You mustn't believe every beggar who comes to your door. She—But this was no common beggar. He was a sea captain who had lost everything in a shipwreck. He—How do you know he was? She—He told a straightforward story about how his ship went to pieces on the coast of Switzerland.

Seven Rules of Life.

Live upstairs if you wish to be in good health! "Up how many flights?" Only one flight of seven steps. I will describe them.

First Step.—Eat wheat, oats, corn, fruits, beef, mutton, plainly cooked, in moderate quantity and but two meals a day.

Second Step.—Breathe good air day and night.

Third Step.—Exercise freely in the open air.

Fourth Step.—Retire early and rise early.

Fifth Step.—Wear flannel next your skin every day of the year and so dispose your dress that your limbs may be kept warm. Bathe frequently.

Sixth Step.—Live in the sunshine. Let your bedroom be one which receives a flood of light and spend your days either out in the sunlight or in a room which is well lighted.

Seventh Step.—Cultivate a cheerful temper. Seek the society of jolly people. Absolutely refuse to worry and, above all, don't be afraid to laugh. Live above. Sickness cannot crawl up there. Disease prowls about in the basement. Rarely does it get upstairs. —Dr. F. G. Butler in Chicago Journal.

The Shade He Wanted.

Delacroix, the painter, was walking out one day in Paris with a friend of his when he fell into a brown study.

"What is up with you now?" said the friend.

"I can't get a certain shade of yellow," replied the artist.

"What sort of yellow?"

Just then a cab drove past.

"The very thing!" the painter gasped out. "Stop, stop!"

"I am engaged," the cabby replied without stopping.

Delacroix started in pursuit and at a steep place in the Rue des Martyrs overtook the cab. Opening the door, he said in tones of entreaty to the passenger inside:

"Do please tell your driver to stop. I want your complexion for a painting on which I am at work. There is a color merchant close at hand. I shall not detain you above five minutes, and in acknowledgment of the service you render me I will present you with a sketch of my picture."

The bargain was struck. Delacroix got his yellow, and a few months later the "fare" received a sketch of his "Assassination of the Archbishop of Liege."

Truth In Jest.

According to historical tradition, the conquest of Finland was foretold in jest that soon became earnest by its conqueror, Peter the Great, to his jester, Balakireff.

Balakireff had vexed the czar by too impudent a joke and had been summarily banished with the menacing injunction never to appear on Russian soil again. He disappeared discreetly, but one day not long after Peter, glancing out of a window, saw his unmistakable figure and quizzical countenance jogging comfortably by, perched in a country cart. Impulsively he ran down to him and demanded to know why he had disobeyed.

"I haven't disobeyed you," was the answer. "I am not on Russian soil now."

"Not on Russian soil?"

"No. This cart load of earth that I'm sitting on is Swedish soil. I dug it in Finland only the other day."

Peter laughed, but he said, "If Finland be Swedish soil now, it shall be Russian soil before long!" And he made good his words.

His Examination Concluded.

In the evidence before a parliamentary committee concerning the opposition to a railway Hodge scored a point which accentuates a certain legal fiction with reference to skilled witnesses.

A Scotch farmer was giving his testimony in favor of the bill.

"Is it true," said the wily K. C. in his most searching style, "that you, sir, said to Mr. Guild that you were willing to give your evidence on the other side if they would pay you better?"

"Aye," said the pawky farmer, "and" (after a pause) "let me jist pit the same question to ye—if ye had been offered a bigger fee, wad ye no hae been on th'ither side yersel'?"

It is needless to say that the K. C. did not cross question the witness further.—Pearson's Weekly.

Pipes Frozen by Warm Spells.

It is a curious fact that water pipes under ground will often freeze during the warm spell that follows a cold snap. The explanation made for this interesting phenomenon is that after a cold wave a large quantity of heat is taken from the ground in the work of changing the frozen moisture into water, and thus, on the principle of the ice cream freezer, the pipe is chilled, enough heat being taken from it to freeze it.

Cause For Thanks.

"Alas!" sighed the tramp dramatically. "No matter where I turns, there's a hand raised against me."

"Which shows you ought to be thankful fer one thing," said the farmer.

"What's that?"

"That it ain't a foot that's raised."

Self Possessed.

Mrs. Manykids—There is one thing about our girls—they are always self possessed. Papa Manykids (grimly)—Yes, they're too self possessed. I wish they'd get some one else to possess them.

Liszt's Advice.

Being asked one day what one should do in order to become an efficient piano player, Liszt replied laconically, "One must eat well and walk much."

THE DIRECTOIRE BAG.

It Shares Honor This Season With Fur Wrist Satchels.

It is rather interesting to know why the directoire bag has reached its apex as the directoire styles are waning, says a fashion authority.

We are glad to welcome them at any time, and they harmonize with the remnants of the moyen age clothes that are left with us. But why didn't they come in with the pantaloon skirt and the narrow coat? Possibly they were overlooked in the amazing amount of odds and ends that made accessories so important last year. Probably they were projected and didn't fall in with the mood of the people.

Whatever the reason or without one, the truth is that these most ornamental and useful trifles have become the last fashion of the day.

All the gold and glitter that is an expression of the day is used to build them up into something important. The brocades and rusty gold medallions of the Louis days are combined as well as the satin and rhinestones of the middle ages.

Whatever is full of shine and sparkle is preferred to anything somber and strictly useful. Black silk may be all very well in its way, but this way is not desired.

Not that black bags are lacking. Far from it. But they are made of jet and velvet and beading. Lovely ones are of the jet. The entire bag is of it, mounted over satin and flecked here and there with silver or gold.

And there are alluring ones of cloth of silver in that faded gun metal tone that is so fashionable. As ornament and a note of further extravagance there is added a huge silver rose.

The bullion flowers are quite a feature of many of these bags. One special model of heavy tarnished gold net over French pink brocade is intwined with the button roses of the Watteau period, built in silver and gold. There is also an oblong mirror in the bottom of this on the outside, so the vanity idea is well carried out.

Although the fair, frail bags of pale satins with fringe of crystals will suit some fancies, the sumptuous ones of tapestry brocade with dull metal are richer looking.

All have a heavy fringe not only in the directoire way of hanging from the lower edge, but going all around. This tasseled trimming is quite a feature. Extravagant fancies are carried out in it. The heaviest kind of bullion is used with balls of open tassels as a finish. Strung beads are dominant, and crystals of all colors are frequent.

One of the quaint ideas is to have a heavy Napoleon crest in an empire wreath done in gold or silver in the middle, and it is not at all new to have the surface of the satin powdered with embroidered bees. Another odd idea in bags is carried out in fur. Such a bag is very smart worn with three piece fur sets.

WHAT WOMEN ARE DOING.

Elinor Glyn and Yvette Guilbert are announced as recent members of anti-suffrage associations. Mrs. Glyn has joined an English society, and Mme. Guilbert has been proposed for membership in an association in this country. Both women are said to have declared their inability to understand why any woman should want to vote when she has health and a good husband.

Mrs. T. P. O'Connor and Mrs. Marion Holmes are the editors of a new woman suffrage weekly paper, the Vote, which has just been launched in London. It is the official organ of the Women's Freedom league, of which Mrs. Despard is president. The Suffragist, another equal rights paper recently begun in London, makes a specialty of advocating the cause by caricature, cartoons and humorous verse.

A creche for the children of rich women is said to be the latest move in the interest of the women and children of London. This creche is for the special benefit of well to do mothers who, striving to be fashionable, have taken up bridge whist. They begin to play cards about noon and often are unable to get back to their homes before 9 in the evening. The object of the creche is to insure careful attention for their children instead of leaving them to the care of servants.

To Keep Dessert.

If you want to keep your desserts on the top of the ice place a newspaper over the ice, and your dishes will never slip off or tip over. Ice should always be covered with a newspaper and as soon as it becomes saturated replace with a new one.

On a Sailing Vessel.

Instead of the usual routine work on a steamer—paint washing and so forth—the work on a sailing ship varies widely. It may be making or shortening sail, bending or unbending fine or heavy weather canvas, squaring in or bracing up the yards, tacking or wearing ship, and, no matter what the labor, one always had the satisfaction of seeing the result. The speed and sailing qualities of a vessel were things that could be discussed with interest as well as the length of passage. In bad weather, when excitement ran high and cursing was considered quite in order, struggling up aloft with wet or frozen canvas—one hand for the ship and the other for yourself—on a dark, dirty night put a man on his mettle, and should the foresail be handled or the main topsail settled and the cry of "Splice the main brace!" be heard—well, one felt at peace with the world.

In the tropics catching sharks, harpooning dolphins and porpoises, singing, dancing, telling yarns and reading over old love letters are diversions not easily forgotten by those who have experienced them. Being becalmed in the tropics on a beautiful moonlight night brought home to one the beauties and wonders of nature and the existence of a God with whom one felt in closer touch on such nights as those. —A British Marine Officer in Atlantic.

Slightly Acquainted.

As an instance of the "marrying in haste" principle that obtains in some American cities an English lady who visited Chicago relates how her maid, who accompanied her, quickly became imbued with the desire to become Mrs. Somebody.

One morning she appeared before her mistress and, with glowing eyes, announced that she had named the day and would become a wife at the end of the week.

"Are you going back home, then?" the lady asked.

"Oh, no, ma'am; it's an American gentleman," replied the maid.

"But," remonstrated her mistress, "we've only been here a fortnight."

"That's no matter. He wants the wedding to be on Saturday."

"Well, can't you get him to postpone the marriage just a little till I can get another maid?"

"Well, ma'am, I'd like to oblige you; but, you see, I don't feel well enough acquainted to ask him to do that."—London Answers.

A Mean Trick.

"Talking of mean tricks," said the big man, "there was Ballantine. This man Ballantine came in late to a song recital at Palm Beach, and there wasn't a vacant seat in the house.

"Ballantine noticed Mrs. Jerome Blank. Mrs. Jerome Blank, he knew, had a very handsome husband that she kept a strict watch over. She didn't like him to associate with any of the fair sex.

"Ballantine, edging near to Mrs. Blank, who had an excellent seat, said in a loud voice to a friend:

"'Who was that enormously pretty girl I saw Jerome Blank talking to on the pier?'

"In about four seconds Mrs. Blank was gone and Ballantine was seated comfortably in her chair."—Kansas City Star.

A Curious Experience.

Lombroso, the famous Italian criminologist, once had a curious experience. He was in a printing office correcting the proofs in his "Delinquent Man" with the chief reader when on reaching a page which dealt with a young man who, impelled by jealousy, had stabbed his fiancee he made a surprising discovery. The proofreader was this man.

"Suddenly," Lombroso said in telling the story, "he threw himself at my feet, declaring that he would commit suicide if I published this story with his name. His face, before very gentle, was completely altered and almost terrifying, and I was really afraid that he would kill himself or me on the spot. I tore up the proofs and for several editions omitted his story."

Cooking Your Goose.

The phrase "I'll cook your goose for you" originated in this manner: Eric, king of Sweden, coming to a certain town, besieged it, but, having few soldiers, was obliged to desist. The inhabitants in derision hung out from the walls a goose on a pole. Later Eric returned with re-enforcements and in reply to the challenge of the heralds observed that he had come "to cook their goose for them" and proceeded to storm the town and make it hot for the inhabitants.

A Sporting Chance.

"I'll teach you to play at pitch and toss!" shouted the enraged father. "I'll flog you for an hour, I will!"

"Father," instantly said the incorrigible as he balanced a penny on his thumb and finger, "I'll toss you to make it two hours or nothing."—Cassell's Journal.

COLOSSUS OF RHODES.

One of the Ancient Seven Wonders of the World.

The ancients succeeded in making that alloy of copper which is known as bronze. Among the seven wonders of the world was the famous statue, wholly made of bronze, historically known as the Colossus of Rhodes. It represented Phoebus, the national deity of the Rhodians. It was begun by Chares, a pupil of Lysippus, the sculptor, and was completed by Laches 288 B. C. The popular belief is that it stood astride the harbor of Rhodes, that it was 105 feet high and that ships could easily sail between its legs.

Pliny said that few men could clasp its thumb. It was cast on metal plates, afterward joined together, and this process occupied twelve years. In the interior was a spiral staircase reaching into its head, and in a great mirror suspended to its neck were reflected the coast of Syria and the ships sailing to Egypt.

After it had stood for sixty-four years this colossus was overthrown by an earthquake, and its remains lay on the shore for 923 years—that is, until A. D. 672—when they were sold by the Saracens to a dealer. The original cost was 300 talents—about $6,000,000—and it is not too much to say that a similar image might be constructed now in one-fourth of the time and at one-third of the original cost. Rhodes, by the way, must have had colossus on the brain, for Pliny relates that the port was adorned with 1,000 colossal statues of the sun.

LONDON THEATERS.

The Ordeal of Getting Past the Aged Ticket Taker.

The first difference I always find between going to the play in London and in New York is that in New York the man who has paid for a seat is made to feel that he is a patron of the house, while in London he is greeted by the staff of the theater not exactly as an intruder, but as a necessary evil. They appreciate that an audience is a necessary evil, but sooner than have one they would almost prefer to close the house.

In London for that importantly strategic outpost of ticket taker an old man of eighty is always employed. You think this is accident, but it is not. Old age naturally suggests failing eyesight, and when he keeps you waiting in the foyer while he examines your ticket and assures himself that it is not a laundry bill or a motor bus receipt you attribute the delay to his old eyes. But in detaining you he has a motive. Standing at his elbow, scowling darkly, there always is another man, apparently a plain clothes out from Scotland Yard, uncomfortably disguised in evening dress. And while the aged ticket taker pretends to scrutinize your ticket the lookout man scans you. You cannot escape his eye. He never sleeps. No American, no matter how reckless, can hope to pass that man with a concealed bomb or a revolver or wearing a white tie with a dinner coat.—Collier's.

Flies at Sea.

The finding of flies and butterflies a long way out at sea is perhaps to most readers a fact not very well known. A recent traveler in the tropics relates that when thirty miles out from land a plague of flies overtook the vessel on which he was steaming. The cabin was so full of them that the beams were blackened. Common black housefiles they were for the most part, with, however, a good sprinkling of large green flies. Where they could have come from was a mystery, but they were a terrible nuisance, and, although those on board swept off hundreds in a net, their numbers were not sensibly diminished. Another singular circumstance was that, although no land was in sight, large dragon flies repeatedly flew across the ship, and a large dark butterfly was observed to flit across in the direction of the nearest land, quite thirty miles away, without stopping to rest on the vessel at all.—London Globe.

Both Rather Flippant.

There is a curious parallelism between two stories told respectively of the late Mr. Spurgeon and of Dean Swift.

Mr. Spurgeon on hearing of the devastation wrought by an earthquake in Essex merely remarked, "I am glad to hear that my county is moving at last."

The dean of St. Patrick's, Dublin, was watching with a friend the roof of a building on which several men were at work fixing slates. Suddenly one of the men vanished. Thereupon the dean turned to his companion and said, "I like to see a man go quickly through his work."

Egotism of Genius.

When Wordsworth, Southey and Coleridge were walking together, and Coleridge remarked that the day was so fine "it might have been ordered for three poets," the gentle Wordsworth promptly exclaimed: "Three poets! Who are the other two?"

Disraeli, when a mere youth, wrote to his sister that he had heard Macauley, Shell and Grant speak, "but between ourselves I could floor them all." And again he said, "When I want to read a good book I write one."

His Birthday.

"When were you born?" asked an inquisitive of Robert Louis one day. "May 10, 1880," was the instant reply, and Robert Louis and Fanny Stevenson exchanged glances. This was their wedding day.

Wonderful Praise Accorded Peruna the Household Remedy

Mrs. Maria Goertz, Orienta, Oklahoma, writes:

"My husband, children and myself have used your medicines, and we always keep them in the house in case of necessity. I was restored to health by this medicine, and Dr. Hartman's invaluable advice and books. People ask about me from different places, and are surprised that I can do all of my housework alone, and that I was cured by the doctor of chronic catarrh. My husband was cured of asthma, my daughter of earache and catarrh of the stomach, and my son of catarrh of the throat. When I was sick I weighed 100 pounds; now I weigh 140.

A Word of Suggestion.

What in our estimation stands as a danger signal to the merchants in Bellefonte and Centre County is the step taken a day or two ago by the mammoth John Wanamaker store, at Philadelphia. Full page advertisements in the Philadelphia newspapers announced that hereafter that store will pay freight, express and postage charges on all purchases of $5 and over. Radical as it is, it is but natural to anticipate that the other large department stores in Philadelphia will adopt a like course.

It requires but little figuring to see what this means to each and every one of our local merchants. Heavy inroads on their business must necessarily follow unless our home people insist on standing by home institutions.

To the people of Bellefonte and of the county we strongly urge that they be not influenced to divert their patronage to the city department stores. Our merchants have their money invested at home. They are a large part of our business community. They need our patronage. Without it they cannot continue. To allow our merchants to suffer because of offers by city department stores would be a step backward. Not only our merchants but each and every community in the county would bear a share of the loss.

This is a time when home pride should prevail. Our merchants offer to their patrons first class goods and at reasonable prices. They ask and deserve our support. Every dollar sent to a city department store is a dollar taken out of Centre County. Let us firmly stand by our home people and home institutions and keep our money in the county.

Postal Savings Banks.

At last a bill, reported from committee, is before the Senate, the object of which is to establish postal savings banks.

"Unconstitutional!" shouts Senator Bailey, who pretends to speak for the Democratic Party.

"Unconstitutional!" echoes Senator Rayner.

Of course. Go it, Bailey! Go it, Rayner! Go it, Democrats! For what do Democratic leaders in the Congress exist except to block every progressive measure? Of what use is the Democratic Party as at present led save to oppose anything that it does not of itself originate?

Meanwhile, and we confess it with reluctance, there are certain Republicans in both Senate and House who are lukewarm in this matter. Indeed, they are more than lukewarm. They are personally hostile. Let them see to it that they keep their hostility under cover in order that they may not find themselves classed by the public with the obstruction policies of the Democrats.

Postal savings banks are conducted in all enlightened countries with the exception of the United States. There is no theory about them to be worked out. They are based upon experience, and but for certain banks in this country, banks that have feared that their deposits might suffer if postoffices were opened to the depositor, the postal savings bank would have been established here many years ago.

There is nothing in the proposed bill that need actually harm any interest. Individual deposits are limited to $500, and the postal authorities are to turn them over to local banks and require but two and one-half per cent. interest, two of which will go to the depositor. The bill has one fault—it does not go far enough. The limitations on deposits are too small. But it is the first step, and it is the first step that every infant must learn to take before it can achieve a second.

It is the wage earner in the small village or town where banking facilities are meagre, who will eventually be benefited. He may take his small savings to the postoffice, receive two per cent. interest on them and be certain that when he wants his money back again he can have it, for the government guarantee is back of it.

The member of Congress who can deny this privilege must have small regard for the strugglers for a living, who want to feel that their savings are secure. Either that or else certain banking interests are too influential. Phila. Inquirer.

Plant Alfalfa.

and 50 pounds nitrate of soda in addition to a dressing of stable manure, if the soil is not naturally fertile.

"4. Inoculation. Alfalfa is a legume, and has power to appreciate free atmospheric nitrogen through the agency of bacteria in nodules on the plant roots. Its power to get such a supply of nitrogen is dependent upon the presence of the bacteria. These bacteria are not the same as the ones belonging to red clover. They may be present in a soil that never has grown alfalfa and they may not be present. When sweet clover is not a weed of the section, it is safest to assume that the bacteria are absent previous to any seeding of alfalfa. A few bacteria doubtless are introduced into the ground with the dust on the seed, but they do not multiply rapidly enough to supply alfalfa plants with the needed nitrogen.

"In securing inoculation the application of some soil from an old alfalfa field is helpful. If the soil is expensive for any reason we advise the use of 200 pounds per acre. If it is not costly, a larger quantity per acre should be used. The inoculating soil should be taken a few inches below the surface of the field, and it should not be exposed to hot sunshine or drying winds. It should be broadcasted and worked into the surface soil with a disc or acme harrow. Time is required for multiplication of bacteria.

"If no alfalfa bacteria are present in the soil before the seeding is done a sufficient number may be introduced with the seed to start inoculation, and some plants may have nodules upon their roots. For this reason the second experiment with alfalfa should be on the plat where the first failure was made if soil conditions are reasonably favorable. If some alfalfa plants stood one year there probably is some inoculation. Break the land and reseed.

"5. The Seed. Pure seed is essential. It should be bright, plump and clean. Alfalfa seed resembles that of red clover, but it is larger and when fresh it has a greenish yellow color. One common impurity is dodder seed. Dodder is a parasitic plant that twines about the alfalfa and thrives on its juices. There is no remedy for this pest when once established in a field except to plow up and not to reseed with alfalfa or clover for several years.

"Alfalfa is seldom injured by heavy seeding, and often it would be better if more seed had been used. Probably in no case should less than 20 pounds per acre be sown, and we recommend 30 pounds per acre in all experimental work. Thick sowing is an advantage, because the alfalfa stands better, the hay is a better quality and weeds are subdued.

"6. Time of Seeding. Alfalfa may be sown at any time during the growing season, but for this section we recommend either early seeding, which is midway between the best time for sowing oats and that for planting corn, or else seeding between August 1st and the 10th. If a nurse crop is desired with spring seeding, we recommend beardless spring barley, using six pecks per acre. The purpose of the nurse crop is to prevent the growth of weeds and annual grass until the alfalfa plants can get a start. Our experience at the Pennsylvania Station and the experience of many successful growers throughout our eastern states cause us to prefer the 1st to the 10th of August for alfalfa seeding. If the land is seriously infested with summer grasses, the seeding may be delayed ten days with profit. The seed bed should be firm and moist. A good plan is to break the ground in June, roll and disc thoroughly and then continue to harrow and roll each week until time of seeding. The last two or three harrowings should be made with an implement that does not loosen the soil much below the surface. A well packed and fine seed bed will get considerable supply of moisture from the subsoil during dry weather, and a light rain fall will give sufficient moisture for seeding if the water is saved by means of an earth mulch. The seed should be covered one-half inch to an inch and no nurse crop should be used.

"Mid-summer seedings with clover and grass and other small seeds often fail through the fault of the farmer. The soil below and around the seed should be sufficiently firm to permit moisture to rise and cause it to germinate. It is a poor policy to sow small seeds on ground that is too dry to cause germination. If sown immediately before a rain, the ground may crust and dry out rapidly. If there is not enough moisture in the seed bed to cause the seed to germinate, wait for a rain and then harrow, sow the seed, cover lightly and roll.

"7. After Treatment. Failure with alfalfa often results from neglect to cut early enough. The amount of growth is not a consideration. When lower leaves begin to turn yellow, or when buds are starting from the main stem near the surface of the ground, use the mower. Under normal conditions there will be a few blossoms at this time."

Comets.

We know positively that comets attain their immense extension in space on account of the material comprising them being excessively tenuous, thinner than the lightest filmy haze of summer, says Professor Harold Jacoby, for we know the comets are not massive; they are almost entirely without weight. And this we know with certainty, because their arrival produces no perturbations of motion among the planets of the solar system, while the inexorable laws of mechanical science tell us that a massive comet must surely disturb the usual orderly planetary orbits. A comet might, indeed, strike the earth, though such a collision is most improbable. But even if it should ever occur the visible effects would probably be no greater than those produced occasionally by meteorites, or "falling stars."

The other possible danger from the comet, the chance of suffocation from gases in the tail, is also negatived by actual observation, for it is almost certain that our earth did once pass through a comet's tail, and no one noticed it at the time. Only the subsequent calculations of astronomers brought out the fact that the cometary orbit and that of the earth really had a common point of intersection and that both bodies occupied that point at the same time.—New York American.

Doubtful Praise.

A fullback in a football team once had the misfortune to put the ball through his own goal. This regrettable error lost his side the game, and he suffered agonies of self reproach on the long journey home.

"I'm no more use than a chocolate footballer," he said to his sweetheart, who had traveled many miles to see him play. "A slip of a boy from school would have shaped better than I did."

"Now, George, I won't let you say such horrid things about yourself!" declared his loyal sweetheart. "You've no idea how popular you are. I heard a gentleman praising you up to the skies this afternoon."

"Never!" emphatically exclaimed the incredulous player.

"Oh, but it's quite true!" she said proudly. "He said you'd brought his club the best bit of luck they'd had for ages, and he heartily wished you were playing against them in every match."—Exchange.

"The Girl from the U. S. A."

In a late review of theatrical productions by a prominent dramatic critic, the play the "Girl from the U. S. A." received a full measure of praise. The story deals with an American girl who has been placed in an aristocratic convent in Paris, France, that her education might receive an ultra "Finish". There she has formed a deep and lasting friendship with Vivienne de Voltone, a French girl. The play opens with a deep intrigue, both social and political, on the part of the Turkish Ambassador to France. The Girl follows her abducted friend into the innermost recesses of the sacredly guarded harem of a Turkish pasha, and in the guise of a new "Favorite" is terrorized to find that the very Turk whose scheme she is trying to frustrate, has fallen in love with her. Only by shrewd diplomacy can she save herself from the clutches of an unlicensed barbarian. And later, in the ceremonious mazes of Chinese society, her native wit saves the day for herself and friends. Although the plot leads one among scenes of oriental splendor, the tone of the play remains vividly and thoroughly American in sentiment. The climaxes are thrilling and unexpected, and the comedy of several novel characters is as welcome as it is diverting. There are some splendic musical numbers added to an already complete entertainment, and altogether the "Girl from the U. S. A." is somebody you will want to be acquainted with when she appears at the Garman Opera House on Tuesday evening, February 8.

with your hard earned savings. During these prosperous times the temptation to invest in some form of speculation is very great. All sorts of inducements are offered and unless great caution is exercised errors are likely to be made that will prove costly. Those who were longing and hoping for an old fashioned winter are having their wish gratified to the fullest extent. At no time has the snow been too deep for the men who are hauling mine ties, props, paper wood or sawed lumber and the loading side at the railroad has been a veritable hive of industry. The men who have these products to ship are losing no time in getting them to the railroad and as many as ten car loads a week are being shipped. This industry is the source of a large income to those who have them to market and employs many men and teams during the winter season. The good sledding also offers an excellent opportunity for those who are hauling lime stone.

He Knew Lincoln.

Ask any engine driver in the East who Jim Hunt is, and he will say, "Who—Jim? Why, he's the man that brought Abe Lincoln from Schenectady to Albany. He'll tell you about it if you'll go to Albany." Jim Hunt is seventy-five years old. He was an engineer on the New York Central while the present generation of locomotive drivers were playing in the clinkers in the train yards. When he is not playing pinochle with the firemen of Steamer No. 7, he is telling how Abe Lincoln looked when he stood on the platform of his car and watched the crowds that came to meet him all along the seventeen miles from Schenectady to Albany. Jim says he felt proud that day. "My engine was Erastus Corning, Jr., No 47. She wasn't very big. You could put her in the tender of these fellows running now, but she was as sleek and smooth as your pet cat." The firemen of No. 7 have bought him a wheel chair, which he can run by turning two cranks. They put a bicycle light on it for a headlight, and every morning, on this go-by-hand lomocotive, he goes from his home to the engine house, where he sits all day telling stories of railroad life in the early sixties.

Mr. E. A. Kelley, Belvidere, Ill., writes us: "I am an ex-engineer with 22 years active service to my credit. About three years ago my kidneys were so that I had to give up my engine. First I was troubled with severe aching pain over the hips. Then followed inflammation of the bladder, and specks appeared before my eyes. A sample of Foley's Kidney Pills that I tried, so benefited me that I bought more. I continued to take them until now I can safely testify they have made me a sound and well man." Sold by C. M. Parrish.

Coloring Billiard Balls Red.

It often happens that red billiard balls more or less completely lose their color and then present a disagreeable appearance. But nothing is easier than to restore their original color. To do this dissolve some dried sorrel, after having pounded and sifted it to assure solution, in a small quantity of water placed in a porcelain capsule large enough to take a billiard ball. Heat this liquid till it is tepid only and add as a mordant about ten drops of sulphuric acid. Put the ball to be colored in the capsule and leave it there about three-quarters of an hour on the corner of a stove, the temperature not being allowed to exceed from 40 degrees to 50 degrees C. At the end of that time take it away from the fire and let it cool.

The operation is complete in from two to three hours. Care must be taken to turn the billiard ball from time to time, so that it may be colored all over, for the coloring matter is deposited, and the part of the ball at the bottom would be too deeply colored.

When the ball is withdrawn from the liquid it only requires wiping and then rubbing strongly with a woolen rag to make it brilliant again. It may be further polished by means of chamois leather impregnated with colcothar.—Vulgarisation Scientifique.

Bread and Gloves.

"Did you ever notice that the man who brings bread to this place always wears heavy gloves?" asked the regular boarder at the hasbery in addressing his guest.

"No; I don't get here often enough to notice it," answered his friend.

"Well, you see him now. He always wears gloves, especially in handling rye bread."

"Yes?"

"It's a fact. Maybe you would not believe me if I told you that he is more apt to get his hands torn and cut than I am working at machinery all day."

"Really?"

"I never have learned the real cause, but the bread seems to have rough edges which scratch and cut the hands if it is handled in large quantities. Of course one or two loaves would not have any bad effect, but hundreds of loaves a day passing through a man's hands seem almost as dangerous as sandpapered brick would be."—St. Joseph Gazette.

Tender Hearted Maid.

"No," said the heiress, "I am sorry, but I can never be your wife."

"Why not?" queried the poor but otherwise honest young man.

"Because," she explained, "I couldn't bear to have your feelings hurt by hearing people say you married me for my money."—Chicago News.

DIDN'T KNOW HIM.

He Was Not In the Colored Porter's Hall of Fame.

A southerner noted for the liberality of his tips stopped at a Baltimore hotel where negro porters predominated. His name was speedily known to every member of the serving fraternity and his every wish anticipated. Soon after his arrival he sent his card to a friend who made his home in the hotel, but whose temperament happened to be quite the opposite of that of his open handed caller—retiring, not given to "tipping" or any other form of sociability and who therefore lived almost unknown to those about him.

The old darky who received the card studied it for a full minute.

"'Scuse me, colonel," he said, "but I don't b'leebe nobody by dat name come here dis mawning."

"This morning!" returned the other. "Of course not! Mr. Blank has lived here for months. You know my name well enough, and I haven't been here a day. Do you mean to say you can't remember a man who has made his home here since some time last winter?"

"Scuse me, colonel, sah," began the old man deferentially, "but you must know, sah"—as if uttering the subtlest compliment—"dat dere's gemmans what can make demsels more notorious in one day, sah, dan odder gemmans does in a year, sah!"—Youth's Companion.

THE SETTING SUN.

When Vulcan Sailed It Round the Ocean So It Could Rise Again.

The ancients had some queer theories whereby they sought to explain the rising and setting of the sun. They thought the earth to be flat and were greatly puzzled to know how the same sun which plunged into the ocean at a fabulous distance in the west could reappear the next morning at an equally great distance in the east. A number of remarkable theories were advanced, and every one of them was wrong.

Mythologists of old asserted that after the sun had dipped in the western ocean at sunset (the Iberians and other ancient nations actually imagined that they could hear the hissing of the waters when the glowing globe was plunged therein) he was seized by Vulcan and placed in a golden goblet. This strange craft, with its astonishing cargo, navigated the ocean by a northerly course so as to reach the east again in time for sunrise the following morning.

Among the more sober physicists of old, as related by Aristotle, it was believed that in some manner the sun was conveyed by night across the northern regions and that darkness was due to mountains which screened off the sunbeams during the voyage.

Anticipation.

Lieutenant Shackleton tells how when in the antarctic wastes he and his companions sustained their spirits and their bodies as well when supplies had to be cut down to a minimum by dwelling upon the glorious eating they would have on returning to headquarters. The value of such mental sustenance has long been recognized by up to date commanders. There was the German officer in the war of 1870 who sustained the flagging spirits and weary legs of his men by shouting: "There is a brewery inside that town! Let us get there before anybody else!" History relates that the men did get there with remarkable speed. Equally shrewd was that Japanese commander in the Manchurian war who, seeing his men exhausted with thirst and knowing full well the wonderful properties of pickled plums, cried out, "Two miles from here there is a forest of plums." The anticipated plums went far to relieve their parched mouths.

What West Point Does For Its Cadets.

What West Point does for its cadets is precisely this: it takes its youth at the critical period of growth; it isolates them completely for nearly four years from the vicious influences that corrupt young manhood and from the atmosphere of commercialism; it provides absorbing employment for both mental and physical activities; it surrounds them with exacting responsibilities, high standards and exalted traditions of honor and integrity, and it demands a rigid accountability for every moment of their time and for every voluntary action. It offers them the inducements of an honorable career and a sufficient competence as a reward of success, and it has imperative authority for the enforcement of its conditions and restraints.—Colonel Charles W. Larned in National Magazine.

Newcomb's Definition of "Magnet."

Personally Newcomb was an agreeable companion and a faithful friend. His success was due largely to his tenacity of purpose. The writer's only personal contact with him came through the Standard Dictionary, of whose definitions in physical science Newcomb had general oversight. On one occasion he came into the office greatly dissatisfied with the definition that we had framed for the word "magnet"—a conception almost impossible to define in any logical way. We had simply enumerated the properties of the thing, a course which in the absence of authoritative knowledge of their causes was the only rational procedure. But Newcomb's mind demanded a logical treatment, and, though he must have seen from the outset that this was a forlorn hope, his tenacity of purpose kept him, pencil in hand, writing and erasing alternately for an hour or more. Finally he confessed that he could do no better than the following pair of definitions: "Magnet, a body capable of exerting magnetic force," and "magnetic force, the force exerted by a magnet." With a hearty laugh at his beautiful circulus in definiendo he threw down his pencil, and the imperfect and illogical office definition was accepted.—North American Review.

Old Time Quackery.

The eighteenth century was the golden harvest time of the quack, against whom some of the fiercest shafts of Hogarth's satire were directed. The quack loved to surround himself with an atmosphere of mystery, which was calculated to impose upon the credulity of his victims. His room was bedecked with skulls and skeletons. A brisk trade in quackery was carried on by women. J. C. Wright in his book, "The Good Old Times," records the fact that in the year 1789 "a Mrs. Joanna Stephens was awarded £5,000 by the English government 'for a proper discovery made by her for the cure of the stone.' This 'proper discovery,'" adds Mr. Wright, "consisted of a powder, a decoction and pills, the last named being formed from calcined snails, with carrot seeds, hips and haws, the compound being burnt to blackness and then mixed with soap and honey."

A Ludicrous Experiment.

Holmes was one of the many eminent men who have attempted to solve the riddle of the universe. In his case the result was ludicrous. From the sublime thoughts that came to him while under the influence of chloroform he thought he might arrive at some solution. Placing himself in his armchair, with pen, ink and paper at hand, he inhaled the anaesthetic. As drowsiness stole over him the nature of things seemed revealed. By a vigorous effort he seized his pen and wrote—he knew not what, for before he had finished he fell back unconscious. When he recovered he turned with trembling anxiety to the sheet of paper, on which, written in scrawling characters, but quite legible, he found the awful revelation, "A strong smell of turpentine pervades the whole."—London News.

An Accommodating Boy.

A Newark woman who lives in an apartment house changed her iceman not long ago, and the next day the youth who drove the team for the new man put the piece of ice on the dumb waiter in the basement to be hoisted up. She pulled away.

"Heavens," she exclaimed, "that new iceman certainly gives good weight!"

After much effort she got the dumb waiter up to the kitchen level. To her amazement, there was a small boy sitting upon the ice. With what little breath she had left she demanded:

"What in the world did you make me pull you up here for?"

"Why," replied the youngster, "I thought maybe the cake would be too heavy for you to lift, so I came up to help you off with it."—Lippincott's.

Navigators' Date Line.

The international date line is an irregular line drawn arbitrarily on the map of the Pacific ocean near the one hundred and eightieth meridian of longitude, marking the place where navigators change their date on the transpacific voyage. This change is necessary on account of the lengthening of one hour for every fifteen degrees of travel westward. By traveling eastward a day will be gained, westward a day will be lost.—New York American.

A PADEREWSKI STORY.

The Great Musician's First Important Engagement in Paris.

Paderewski's first really important engagement as a pianist was in Paris. He was engaged to play in the drawing room of a lady famous for her musicales, and his fee, which seemed to him enormous, was $20. He managed to persuade the humane agent to pay him in advance, and when Paderewski had redeemed his dress suit from pawn and paid for shoes, gloves, tie and other essentials he had no money left for cab hire, so he was forced to walk to the scene of his engagement.

The music loving audience inspired him. He played with feeling, passion and mastery of his instrument as never before. His success was instant and unmistakable. The poor player had suddenly become the lion of the hour, his dream had become a reality, and fame and fortune were assured him.

At last after disengaging himself from his admirers he turned to leave, when his hostess, remembering with regret the smallness of the fee for so marvelous a performance, offered him her carriage for his return home. But Paderewski's pride came to the rescue. In his courteous yet reserved way he made a formal bow, and, saying, "No, thank you, madame; my own is waiting," he stepped out for his long walk homeward.—Pearson's Weekly.

SCARED THE OLD SAVAGE.

Ruse That Saved Dr. Felkin From King Mtesa of Uganda.

When the well known African traveler Dr. Robert Felkin was staying with the bloodthirsty King Mtesa of Uganda many years ago the king, out of gratitude for his visitor's medical treatment, wished to cut off his head. On Dr. Felkin representing that the treatment was not finished and that if interrupted it would cause Mtesa's death the latter granted him a reprieve until he was quite recovered. Then, however, nothing availed, and the execution was determined upon.

Emin Pasha, who was a friend of Dr. Felkin, had instructed him most accurately about the state of affairs in Uganda and the court of King Mtesa and had revealed to him an important state secret—namely, where Mtesa's powder store was hidden. Dr. Felkin remembered this at the right moment and as a last resort threatened that if Mtesa killed him he would bring down a flash of lightning upon his powder store. Mtesa replied incredulously, "Tell me where it is," whereupon Dr. Felkin whispered in his ear, "It is concealed under your harem."

Mtesa turned pale and allowed Felkin and his companions to live. The "lightning maker's" authority increased when next day a flash of lightning happened to strike near the harem.

Fooled the Town.

University students have long enjoyed a reputation as practical jokers, but there has been nothing quite so successful as the famous sultan of Zanzibar hoax of some years ago at Cambridge. One day the mayor of the town received the following wire from one Henry, Lucas, Hotel Cecil, London: "The sultan of Zanzibar will arrive at Cambridge at 4:27 for a short visit. Could you arrange to show him buildings of interest and send carriage?" The mayor rose to the occasion, and in due course four dark complexioned gentlemen with turbans and voluminous trousers arrived at Cambridge. The mayor and corporation entertained them right royally, but to their chagrin they discovered a few hours later that the interesting orientals were simply a quartet of undergraduates who had played an immense practical joke upon the town.—London Spectator.

The Seat of Punctuation.

At the time Colonel Roosevelt was carrying on his simplified spelling movement in Washington there was a meeting of educators at Battle Creek, Mich., and they visited the great sanitariums there. They were shown through, and particular stress was laid by the guide on the success that attended operations there on enlarged and diseased colons, it being claimed that here was the seat of most disease. There was a banquet that night, and one of the visitors opened his speech like this:

"Washington, as we all know, is the seat of spelling reform; but, I take it, Battle Creek is bound to be the seat of punctuation reform, for, as we were told today, you come here with a colon and you depart with a semicolon."—Saturday Evening Post.

A Duke at Church.

There was a certain old duke who used to sit up in the left hand gallery with his duchess, believing himself to be incog. One Sunday a too officious steward, on seeing the old nobleman take a back seat, hurried up to him and said, "Will not your grace have a better seat?"

"Come along, Maria!" said the old duke. "We're discovered!" And he immediately walked out with the duchess and never showed his face inside the church again.—London Tatler.

Athens Saved by Poetry.

When B. C. 404, after a heroic struggle, Athens, the "City of the Violet Crown," was captured by Lysander there were not wanting clamorous voices to urge that the city whose lust for empire had brought such woes on Greece ought to be laid level with the ground.

The Spartan general at first lent a willing ear to his powerful allies, but while the council was still debating this momentous issue a plaintive voice was heard from the city walls chanting those noble lines from the "Electra" of Euripides, that most human of the poets of Greece, in which the heroine contrasts her fallen lot with the splendid exploits of her father, who had dismantled the towers of Troy.

Lysander bent his head and pondered on fortune's cruel reverses. Triumphant as Agamemnon, who could tell but that he might be reserved for a fate as cruel? The lesson of moderation was accepted. Athens was saved.

Milton has immortalized this dramatic event in one of his best known sonnets:

The repeated air
Of sad Electra's poet had the power
To save the Athenian walls from ruin bare.

Comets and Great Men.

It is somewhat remarkable how often the death of an eminent person has been marked by the appearance of a comet. A certain writer, indeed, after going through a list of comets for 600 years, says that it is "as if God and nature intended by comets to ring the knell of princes, esteeming bells in churches upon earth not sacred enough for such illustrious and eminent performances." To mention only a few, Lotharius the Younger, Louis II., Charles the Bald, Theotillon, bishop of Tours; Henry II. and Richard I. had their knells thus rung by comets. Even in Shakespeare's time the comet was considered a fitting accompaniment to the obsequies of kings:

Hung be the heavens with black, yield day to night.
Comets, importing change of times and states,
Brandish your crystal tresses in the sky,
And with them scourge the bad revolting stars
That have consented unto Henry's death.

—London Outlook.

Thoughtless Clerks.

Every business has a good will cap, and every satisfied customer is a feather in that cap. Trained men at high salaries are employed to keep tightly in place the feathers that are already there and to add new feathers. It is the advertising department that is most conspicuously engaged in the feathering process, while the adjusting department is most characteristically employed in keeping the plums firmly anchored. Both of these departments are maintained at a large proportionate expense, which goes to show the value of feathers. Who, then, in the organization of a business could be mischievous enough to pluck the feathers from the good will cap? Who, indeed? Yet all day long here and there throughout some stores peck, peck, peck, go ruthless beaks, impelled by raven brains in the heads of vacuous clerks.—Bookkeeper.

Painful.

A little story comes from way back concerning Forrest, the tragedian.

It was during his last appearance at Niblo's Garden, in New York. At the time he was suffering untold torture from the gout. A sort of runway had to be constructed from the stage to the dressing room, for he was quite unable to step up or down stairs.

The performance had been "Coriolanus," and Forrest was petulant from pain and tired with his work. He stumbled against the runway, causing such a twinge in his toe as to make him cry out with the pain.

A young actor standing by unfortunately addressed the tragedian at the wrong time, saying:

"Dear me, Mr. Forrest, that must have been exceedingly painful."

"Not half so painful as your acting," was the crusty response.

"Never Too Late to Mend."

Most of us associate the phrase "It's never too late to mend" with Charles Reade's famous novel, and very likely some of us think he invented it. But it is really one of the most ancient gems of popular philosophy. A correspondent of London Notes and Queries has discovered it in a petition from the commonalty to the mayor and aldermen of the city in 1433. It must have been of a respectable age even then, seeing that it is quoted as one of the "proverbs" of the period.

A Failure.

"There isn't enough analogy in the English language," proclaimed the bright young student. "If we say 'male and female' to distinguish sex, why not say 'lion and felion' too?"

"Wouldn't distinguish," replied the practical professor, "considering both are felines."—Baltimore American.

Her Very Picture.

He (rhapsodically)—I adore everything that is grand, exquisite, supereminent. I love the peerless, the serene, the perfect in life. She (blushing coyly)—Oh, George, how can I refuse you when you put it so beautifully?

Our Neighbor.

What is meant by our neighbor we cannot doubt. It is every one with whom we are brought into contact, whosoever it be, whom we have any means of helping.—Dean Stanley.

HIGH SOUNDING NAMES.

Christening the Babies of a Noble Family—Genealogical Revival.

Fashions in names, especially feminine, come and go and come again, sometimes for some traceable reason, usually with none. Not many years ago there was in the United States a marked revival, generally thought to be due to the recent activities in research of genealogically inclined "daughters" and "descendants," of the names popular among our foremothers which had previously for a long while been considered commonplace.

Nurseries and kindergartens showed a crop of quaintly reminiscent little Susans, Ruths, Eunices, Priscillas, Judiths and Dorothys. This fashion fortunately still prevails, but not alone. A few years ago a fancy was imported from England for "jewel names," and, although it never became so popular here as there, it found response in a fairly frequent bestowal of such names as Pearl, Ruby, Jacinth, Crystal, Garnet, Beryl, Emerald or Esmeralda and even an occasional Diamond.

For the last two years flower names have caught the favor of young English mothers in fashionable society and the chronicles of British "nobility and gentry" show many christenings by the names of Violet, Lily, Rose and Myrtle, and not a few by flower names less familiar, such as Iris, Ivy, Daphne, Laurel, Lavender, Fuchsia, Heatherbell and Verbena.

The Duchess of Sutherland has a daughter Lady Rosemary Millicent Leveson-Gower, and Lady Angela Forbes named her little girl Marigold.

Not all these names, despite their pleasantly flowerlike suggestion, can be accounted successful, but the little maids who bear them are luckier than some of their elder sisters, named when the fashion of odd names from old Welsh, Scotch or Saxon chronicles or the poets of even parental invention were popular.

The English society reporter for the last two or three seasons has had to record the doings of debutantes bearing distinguished surnames, prefaced by such disconcerting Christian—rather un-Christian—names as Venetia, Aurea Ela, Linnie, Eldrydd, Dulcibella, Ganfreda, Laline, Morwenna and Lelgarde.

One noble family, especially the Tollemaches, name their babies queerly. Rhona, Mariota, Artemisia, Elfeyda Hersilia and Lyonesse are far enough from the usual, but they have done worse. Even a princess royal might have been excused for a righteous howl of protest at the font had she had to submit, as did one poor infant Tollemache, to being christened by such an appalling sequence as Lyonella Fredgunda Cuthberga Ethelwytha Ideth Ysabel Grace Monica Oranella Plantagenet.

MY MARY'S MAGIC BELL.

I love to hear my Mary sing
Up in that high toned choir.
Oh, when she trills an' tremelos
She is a great high flier!

The organ tralsas, doodle dees.
Then Mary lets 'er go,
An' oh, she goes a-trillin' up
A million miles or so!

She gets so near the gates above
The angels all aspire
To imitate her trills an' thrills
Upon their golden lyre.

But Mary sings a greater song
Upon her dinner bell.
You bet I love her choir songs.
They are most awful swell.

But Mary is a dandy cook,
An' when her dinner's done
When I hear her bell I give a yell
An' for the table run.

Say, Gabriel, when dawns the morn,
When you call folks up yonder
An' you shall toot the judgment horn
With sounds like mighty thunder,

If with the thunders of your horn
You fail to break my sleep
Don't give it up as a bad job
An' leave me there to weep.

Just tell my Mary to ring her bell,
An', though I'm down a mile,
Her magic bell will break my spell,
An' I shall rise to smile.

KURIOS FROM KORRESPONDENTS

Q. Will you please inform me why some of my squabs grow nicely at first and then are found choked to death? A. You are breeding from small throated birds. When your squabs are over the milk period and the old ones give them whole grain their throats are too small for it to pass. Kill all small throated breeders.

Q. Please tell me how to make my hens lay. I cannot keep them from getting fat. I have tried reducing the ration and thought when I got them down to a certain weight they would surely lay, but they didn't. I have used a wide ration too. A. We fear your fowls come from a fat for market strain and not from a bred to lay strain and will only produce capital roasts.

Q. What is a fair price for a young turkey tom and where is the best place to get one. A. From $10 to $15. Buy your birds from a wild turkey ranch where they cross tame and wild. One-half wild blood is enough. There are such ranches in Maryland and Virginia.

Q. Do pigeons get tapeworm? A. Yes; they have had such worms two feet long taken from them.

Q. Which do you consider is the worse pest, mites or head lice? A. Head lice. They are on a chicken all the time, mites only nights.

Q. What is that fancy work on a turkey's head called? A. Caruncles.

Q. What is the difference between down and feathers? A. The chick and duckling first hatched are dressed in down. When this shows quill and web it is called feather.

Q. Why do my Leghorns get white in the face? I couldn't show last winter for this reason. A. You breed from birds with too large a lobe and it grows up into the face. Try the other plan.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

When lightning struck and destroyed the home of Dr. S. A. Orwig, Mays Landing, N. J., he and his wife spent the night in the henhouse. While such a feather bed is not popular, it's wise to keep that coop clean for an emergency.

The United States department of agriculture is taking moving pictures at some of the great poultry farms, the films to be used for educational purposes at fairs and farmers' institutes. The county fairs should substitute these for the "hoochie coochie" shows.

October is the beginning of the poultry year in California. The incubators and hens are then set and the brooders are made ready for the bright eyed ruffle fluffles. At that time eastern breeders are putting in coal and mending the snow shovel.

To California let us go,
Where we'll not have to shovel snow.
But, say, we'll have to pay for ice
That sells at a tremendous price.

When a hen's mouth, throat and intestines are very red and she has watery diarrhea and death is preceded by intense pain, she has been poisoned with salt.

The easiest fowl to carve is the turkey, next is chicken, then come duck and goose. It depends on the size of the joints. Which you buy for Christmas depends on the size of your wad.

The Emeral isle exported $25,000,000 worth of poultry and eggs last year. She used the rotten ones for political purposes.

The toughest part of a fowl is the gizzard. This little organ is seldom diseased. It is sometimes blocked by constipation or pierced by nails and tacks. Yellowish spots and a brimstone smell in the gizzard indicate rat poison.

Missouri's contribution to the turkey famine is 260,000 fat, juicy birds. Oh, where has gone her mule that kicked? The turkey gobblers got 'em licked.

Snow should not be allowed to bank up against the poultry house. It will turn to slush, and the snow water will often trickle through into the pens.

Cuero, Tex., has a great plant where turkeys are dressed for market and loaded on refrigerator cars. Rather than lose weight by cooping and hauling them they are driven to this center in large flocks. Two flocks of 1,600 and 1,800 fat birds were driven in from a distance of eighteen and fifteen miles. They gained weight on the trip.

Dried eggshells are simply worn out lime and are of little use for shells or grit. They are like poor advice tried twice.

Minnesota's First Book.

The first book printed in Minnesota was a Bible. It was printed in 1836, about thirteen years before the first issue of a newspaper in St. Paul.

Light Horse Harry Lee.

Colonel Henry Lee (known to history as Light Horse Harry Lee) was the author of the eulogizing phrase applied to Washington—"First in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen."

Bavarian Beer Glasses.

The ordinary beer glass is regulated by law in Bavaria and must hold exactly half a liter, or nearly nine-tenths of a pint.

Queer Case of Evolution.

The general law of evolution is from the useful and practical into the ideal and beautiful. This seems to be reversed in the case of the lily and the banana. The banana is really a developed tropical lily from which the seeds have been eliminated and the fruit greatly expanded.

Two Toos.

Three Irishmen had four guineas to be equally divided among them. After several unsuccessful efforts by two of them the third settled the business thus: "There are two for you two, and here are two for me too."

Texas.

The area of Texas is equal to a belt of land eleven miles wide encircling the earth at the equator or to a strip of land more than one mile wide reaching from the earth to the moon or to a lane wide enough for the roadbed of a double track railway and long enough to reach from the earth to the sun.

Stoves In Saxony.

For hundreds of years the people of Saxony have used stoves made of fire brick covered with glazed tiles, which retain and gradually radiate the heat for hours after the fire has gone out.

Whales.

Whales are not fish in the scientific sense, but it is interesting to note that these monsters swim at a rate of sixteen miles an hour when excited, although their ordinary speed is estimated at between four and five miles.

Druidzuikers.

In place of wedding cake in Holland wedding sweets are given, bruidzuikers, they are called. They are handed round by children and are served in flower trimmed baskets.

Titanium.

Titanium makes up about two-fifths of 1 per cent of the earth's crust and exceeds in quantity all other heavy metals together except iron. The proportion of iron is about 5 per cent. The bulk of the crust is nonmetallic, 50 per cent being oxygen and 25 per cent silicon.

Iceland.

Iceland exports sulphur, Iceland moss, wool, dried fish, seal skins and oil, whale oil and baleen, eiderdown, birdskins and ponies. It manufactures are entirely domestic.

Eel and Catfish.

Both the eel and the catfish are generally supposed to be scaleless, which is far from the truth, as both bear scales, although these are so minute that they can be seen only with a microscope. In the case of the eel scientists are enabled to tell its age by the size of the scales with which it is covered.

Plymouth Breakwater.

The breakwater at Plymouth, England, contains 3,800,000 tons of stone, or as much as the great pyramid of Cheops.

The Great Bustard.

The heaviest bird that flies is the great bustard. In size it exceeds the Norwegian blackcock. The old males weigh about thirty-five pounds, but when food is plentiful the young males may weigh forty pounds. Great bustards were formerly as plentiful in western Europe as partridges. Now they are rarely found.

A Crimson Secret.

The inhabitants of Fair island, north of Scotland, for centuries have closely guarded a secret process for dyeing textiles a vivid crimson.

Not In the Thunderbolt.

"I sent you a communication a day or two ago," said the indignant caller, "and you wouldn't print it just because it didn't happen to agree with your views."

"What was it about?" asked the editor of the Morning Thunderbolt.

"It was about woman suffrage."

"Oh, yes, I remember."

"You threw it in the wastebasket, I presume."

"I presume I did."

"My object, sir, was to show that a good deal can be said on both sides."

"Well, you said it, all right, sir—on both sides of the sheet. That's the reason why you can't say it in the Thunderbolt. Good morning, sir."—Chicago Tribune.

Here and There.

J. Finley Shugart, of Harrisburg, was a Bellefonte visitor this week.

Thomas Beaver returned home from Washington on Monday evening.

John H. McCauley, of Hublersburg, transacted business in town on Saturday.

John P. Harris and former Sheriff Woodring were visitors to Howard on Tuesday.

Mrs. George Shilling has been entertaining her sister, Mrs. Joseph Pletcher, of Bellwood.

The ground-hog saw his shadow yesterday, so look out for six weeks more of Winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Young are entertaining their daughter, Mrs. Richard Harpster, of Renovo.

Mr. and Mrs. Bower Holter were laid up with the grip for several days this week, but both are improving at present.

A man advertised a team of horses for sale in "The Republican." He has sold the horses. Doesn't this little incident explain itself?

Presiding Elder, Rev. J. C. Reeser, gave a Bible reading last night at the mid-week prayer service of the United Evangelical church.

Mrs. F. Potts Green and daughter, Miss Emma, were among those to attend the funeral of the late J. Green Irvin, at Oak Hall, on Monday.

Mrs. Jacob V. Thomas has rented the new Schad home, on East Linn street, and will come up from Philadelphia to take possession on April 1.

Frank Hull, son of James Hull, who was admitted to the hospital for treatment for typhoid fever, is recovering nicely and is expected home this week.

We were no little pleased to greet J. W. Kepler, of Pine Grove Mills, on Friday of last week. It was our first glimpse of his happy face for ten or twelve years.

Mrs. Minnie Harper, of West Linn street, has been quite ill for the last week or more. Her many friends will be glad to learn that she is somewhat better at present.

Not forgetting that he was once a boy, M. R. Johnson on Monday evening took a sled-load of young folks to Zion, where they were most delightfully entertained at the Corman home.

The second quarterly for this conference will be held at Nittany Furnace, beginning tomorrow (Friday) night, and continuing over Sunday. All are cordially invited to attend.

The Elks on Monday last moved into their new club house, the old Curtin homestead. William Katz and family will move into the rooms in the Larrimer property just vacated by the Elks.

It is understood that the order of the Moose, now being organized in Bellefonte, has secured an option on the old Garman homestead, at the corner of Spring and High streets.

Mrs. T. A. Shoemaker has been quite ill with the grip at the Ft. Pitt Hotel, at Pittsburg. She accompanied Miss Sarah Collins to that city and became so ill while there that Mr. Shoemaker was sent for.

The fourth annual reunion, or State convention, of Elks will be held at Bradford, August 23, 24 and 25, 1910. It is expected that upward of 4,000 Elks from all parts of the State will be in attendance. The business men of Bradford are already beginning to prepare for the big event. Of course, Bellefonte will have a representative delegation on hand.

Samuel Taylor, formerly of Bellefonte, but for some years identified with the 5 and 10 cent store business in various cities, has been transferred from Philadelphia to Columbus, Ohio, taking charge of his new position this week. Mrs. Taylor and little daughter, Eleanor, whose narrow escape from being burned to death was told in "The Republican," are in Bellefonte and will remain until Mr. Taylor has a chance to settle down in Columbus and incidentally pick out a home.

Dr. Fisher, of Zion, so rumor has it, is figuring somewhat on renting the old Dr. Harris offices in the Curtin homestead. Dr. Harris will remove to the store room occupied until recently by Henry Kline, as a shoe store. It is by no means certain that Dr. Fisher will establish an office in Bellefonte. Of course, the Doctor is kept so busy that every place is home to him, but after all Zion is home to Mrs. Fisher and she no doubt will have a voice in deciding the matter.

Don't forget that Professor J. Angel, the well known eye-specialist, will be at the Brockerhoff House on Wednesday and Thursday, February 9 to 10. On this trip to Bellefonte he will make a reduction of twenty-five percent. in his charges and examine eyes free. Professor Angel has been visiting Bellefonte for so long and is so favorably known among Centre County people that he is justly proud of his steadily growing business. Keep in mind the time of his visit, February 9 and 10, at the Brockerhoff House, and also that in addition to examining eyes free he will make a reduction of twenty-five percent. in his charges.

Mrs. L. T. Munson entertained yesterday at her home on North Allegheny Street.

Mrs. Catherine Dinges will entertain the Daughters of the Revolution at her home this evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Sholl gave a birthday party on Monday evening in honor of their daughter, Miss Cora.

Don't forget the fair in the Presbyterian chapel, on Thursday, March 10, to be held under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society.

Mrs. G. W. Rees, wife of the Deputy Internal Revenue Collector, has been ill for several days, but is somewhat improved at present.

There will be a special meeting in the Salvation Army hall tomorrow (Friday) evening, conducted by Rev C. C. Shuey. The public are cordially invited to attend

Mrs. Sheldon entertained the Bridge Club at luncheon yesterday. Mrs. Bush will entertain the club tomorrow evening in her new apartments, in the Bush Arcade.

Next Sunday the last quarterly communion service of the conference year will obsesved in the local United Evangelical church. A cordial invitation to attend is extended to the public.

A number of young folks enjoyed a sled ride to Curtin on Tuesday evening. Arriving there they were entertained at the Shultz home. Mr. and Mrs. Shultz gave them a warm welcome and turned over the entire house for their convenience. The young folks, after a delightful evening, returned home loud in their praises of their hosts.

Illustratating the up-to-date methods of the present time, the Bell Telephone Company installed three phones in as many cars of the Philadelphia Merchants' special train yesterday, during the stay in town of a little over one hour. During that time there were about twenty long distance messages between the train and Philadelphia.

State College students were on the rampage last week. On Friday morning two or three students and one dress suit case appeared at the Pennsylvania passenger station. Nothing would do but that one of the students should try to push the dress suit case through a window. He felt differently about it when taken before Burgess Bower and fined $10 and costs. On Friday evening quote a delegation of students attended the "Buster Brown" performance at the Garman Opera House. At times their conduct was more than annoying to others present, matters finally becoming so that the performance was cut short and the curtain rung down. It seemed that this wasn't enough for one evening so the students gathered in the Brockerhoft House cafe, where they demolished about all the glassware in sight and stole several hunderd cigars. Policeman Dukeman recovered some of the cigars hidden under the straw in a bob-sled before the students had left town. On Saturday friends of the students were in town arranging to pay for the cigars and damage done, so that in all probability there will be no arrests.

It is pretty nearly time the proper authorities put a stop to the kind of snow-balling on the business streets that results in serious damage to property. On Saturday last some irresponsible boys broke a large plate glass window at Zeller's drug store. It is not so long since that a youngster put a hole in a plate glass window at Parrish's drug store. Snow-balling in the old-fashioned style caused little damage or annoyance. Nowdays it seems that a snowball isn't the real thing unless it has a marble or a stone or a bunch of nails at the centre. When fired against a plate glass window the marble or nails cause the trouble. In days gone by, "soakers" were the chief weapons in winter time and plate glass windows were not disturbed. The "soakers" usually passed between the "Jail Hill Gang" and the "Bunker Hill Gang" or the "Cheapsiders." In summer the clashing was invariably attended with the throwing of stones. One day the "Jail Hill Gang" and the "Bunker Hill Gang" had a stone fight on the north side of the jail. A sharp stone cut a terrible gash in the head of Andy Cruse, now living in Denver, Colorado, and——guess we had better stop or somebody might suspect that the boys of today are no worse than those of any other day.

Wedding of Young Couple.

On Tuesday evening, last, at the parsonage of the United Evangelical church, Harry W. Bowersox and Miss Bessie Ostrander were joined in the holy bonds of wedlock. The ceremony was performed by their pastor, Rev. J. F. Hower. Both of these young people are members of the church choir. A host of friends with them blessings in great abundance.

RUMBERGER—KELLEY.

That Samuel B. Rumberger, of Bellefonte, and Miss Anna I. Kelley, of Coleville, had stolen a march on their friends and had gone to Philadelphia to be married did not come to light until Friday of last week when the newspapers of that city announced that they had been granted a marriage license. Mr. Rumberger is engaged with the American Express Company at the place and is a splendid young man. His bride is popular with a wide circle of friends and qualified in every way to grace a home.

ACADEMY'S PROSPECTS

Congressman Barchfeld Gives Assurance of Financial Aid.

That the prospects are good for financial assistance from wealthy men in Pittsburg and Washington was the message conveyed by Congressman A. J. Barchfeld to the Bellefonte Academy last Friday night. The occasion was the annual banquet in honor of the Academy football eleven and substitutes Preceding the banquet a meeting was held in the Scenic theatre, at which Congressman Barchfeld, whose home is in Pittsburg, delivered an eloquent and instructive address on "The Nation's Progress."

It was at the banquet that Congressman Barchfeld, after telling numerous stories, took on a more serious vein and said:

"Laying aside all frivolity for the moment, I want to testify to my deep nterest in this splendid school of yours. I think I can give you assurance of results in the way of help, and results in the very near future."

This word of assurance provoked enthusiastic applause, it being understood by all present that Congressman Barchfeld is endeavoring to induce wealthy residents of Pittsburg, Washington and other cities to make endowments for the Academy. Some of the more enthusiastic of the friends of the Academy look for endowments amounting to upward of $100,000.

Congressman Barchfeld arrived in Bellefonte in a dress suit shortly after 9 o'clock Friday morning. He had been attending a dinner at Washington Thursday evening, given by Vice-President Sherman, and was unable to engage a berth on the sleeping car on the trip to Bellefonte. He went direct from the dinner to the train and had the pleasure of making the all-night trip from Washington in a day coach.

Standing six feet and four inches and built proportionately, Congressman Barchfeld presented a unique picture when he loomed up in the morning in his dress suit. To the Reception Committee on hand to greet him, he laughingly explained matters and added:

"Now, gentlemen, I don't know what plans you have made but I know what I am going to do first. I am going to the hotel and go to bed for a few hours."

During the afternoon, accompanied by J. R. Hughes, John Blanchard, Joseph L. Montgomery and J. Thomas Mitchell, Congressman Barchfeld visited State College, returning in time for the meeting at the Scenic theatre. The crowd there was not so large as the speech of the distinguished visitor deserved, although those in attendance included some of the most prominent citizens of Bellefonte.

Congressman Barchfeld was introduced by Judge Orvis and in a most conversational manner, recounted some of the notable achievements of the leading governments in the last ten years and in conclusion used the facts presented as an argument in favor of a ship subsidy measure, such as has been advocated by President Taft.

To show the appreciation of the audience General Beaver, at the close of the meeting, suggested that all rise in giving a vote of thanks to Congressman Barchfeld.

The banquet was held at the Brockerhoff House. The dining hall was prettily decorated with flowers and the Academy colors. Upward of 75 persons were seated at the tables and the dinner served elicited many flattering comments from the diners. J. R. Hughes was toastmaster. Christy Smith's orchestra, which is far superior to those of most small towns, rendered the music for the occasion and the diners made merry by joining in the chorus of numerous popular songs.

Following Congressman Barchfeld's toast Professor Arthur Sloop spoke on "The Faculty"; Gilbert Meyers, "Our School Life"; Rev. James P. Hughes, "My Students"; Colonel J. L. Spangler, "Bellefonte", and Judge Orvis, "The Alumni".

A Tuberculosis Experiment.

"A very interesting experiment was started by a friend of mine, Doctor Pratt, of Boston the tuberculosis class in connection with a church," says Dr. Williams Osler in Woman's Home Companion for February. "It is a nice sort of practical religion for any church to undertake. Doctor Pratt's first class consisted of fifteen or twenty persons, chiefly young clerks, all in the early stage of the disease, and all still at work. He met them once a week in a room off the school-room of the church, and there they discussed their cases with him. They were weighed every week, a careful analysis was made of their symptoms—how much they had gained, or how much they had lost. Each one took his own temperature, and brought his notebook, and it is a remarkable record of several years' work that has been carried on. A number of these young persons, some with quite well-marked symptoms of the disease, have been completely cured without going to sanatoriums, without going away and while continuing their work. I know of no more encouraging feature in connection with this disease than this practical experiment, which has been carried out so successfully."

STUDENT'S SAD DEATH

W. E. Carroll Sleppy Succumbs to Attack of Typhoid-Pneumonia.

Profound grief among his schoolmates and friend was occasioned by the sad announcement on Sunday morning of the death of W. E. Carroll Sleppy, at the Bellefonte Hospital. He had been ill but a short time, death being due to an attack of typhoid-pneumonia. At his bedside when he died were his father who is a Methodist Episcopal minister, at Freedom, Pa., and also his mother, sister and brother, the last named a physician.

Sleppy was one of the brightest students at the Bellefonte Academy and a star in athletics; a fine, clean young man, he was popular with the entire student body and also with many Bellefonte friends. When his illness become so serious that his removal to the hospital was decided on, it caused the greatest apprehension among his fellow-students.

The parents of the young man were summoned and they spent the last few days of last week at his bedside. All that the attending physicians and loving parents could do failed to check the ravages of the dreaded disease. On Friday night the annual banquet of the Academy football eleven was held and all present stood and drank a silent toast for the speedy recovery of one whose work on the football field had aided in so many proud victories.

Late that night Sleppy's condition became even more alarming and on Saturday he gradually became weaker until death ended his suffering early Sunday morning.

The sympathy of the entire community goes out to the bereaved family of the young man.

"With Lincoln at Gettysburg."

"Lincoln Day" at State College will be celebrated with an address by Colonel Clark E. Carr, of Illinois, on Saturday morning, February 12, at 10.30 o'clock. His subject will be "With Lincoln at Gettysburg." The meeting will be held in the auditorium. Colonel Carr was born in New York but early removed to Illinois, where in political matters he was associated both with Lincoln and Douglas. He was actively identified with the Committee on Arrangements for the Lincoln-Douglas debate, at Galesburg, 1858. As Illinois Commissioner on the Board at the time of the dedication of the battlefield at Gettysburg, Colonel Carr was able to observe the events of that memorable occasion. He is peculiarly prepared to speak authoritatively on Lincoln. Colonel Carr is also author of several books on historical and political topics.

A MODEL HOST

County Treasurer Fink Has Few Friends at Informal Dinner.

On Friday of last week County Treasurer George G. Fink, whose heart is as big as his smile is broad, invited a few friends to accompany him to dinner at the Brockerhoff House. Everything was informal and the twelve who sat down to dinner enjoyed a happy hour. Considering the quantity of food several of those present disposed of Landlord Ray, whose popularity contributes so much to the success of the Brockerhoff House, must have lost money on the meal.

County Commissioner Jacob Woodring and former County Treasurer John Q. Miles ran a close race on deciding which could eat the more. Mr. Miles won out on this but Mr. Woodring captured the prize for being the best looking man at the table.

County Commissioner Zimmerman was voted the most dignified person present while County Auditor Robert Musser was singled out as a man who closely resembles a future County Treasurer.

The dining-room was filled with chorus girls ftom the "Buster Brown" Company, but we will vouch for it that Commissioners' Clerk "Ed". Williams kept his eyes strictly on the roast beef and mashed potatoes. Assistant Clerk Homer Decker didn't.

County Commissioner John Dunlap ate with as much relish as he did in the days when he traveled with an 'Uncle Tom's Cabin" Company.

Mr. Fink demonstrated his ability as a a model host and everybody had a good time. Those who enjoyed his hospitality were Commissioners Woodring, Zimmerman and Dunlap, John Q. Miles, Commissioners' Clerk E. J. Williams, Assistant Clerk Homer J. Decker, County Auditors Robert Musser and C. N. Hoffer, George Parks and George E. Bortell, of Philipsburg, and the Editor of "The Republican."
